

Labour Court Stops Striking workers at Port of Ngqura

[Johannesburg; 14 July 2019] Transnet SOC Ltd has obtained a court interdict to stop the illegal strike action by employees at the Ngqura Container Terminal.

The interdict also orders workers to increase performance levels at the port, which has been hit by a 'go-slow' two weeks ago.

The order by the Labour Court in Port Elizabeth was issued to all operations employees at Ngqura Container Terminal.

Operations have been disrupted by malicious radio interference. Since the suspension of 11 employees last week, radio interference has stopped and operational performance has improved.

Operations at the Durban Container Terminal and Cape Town Container Terminal have also improved.

Transnet is aware of the challenges that this has caused to various industries across the country.

"We are working around the clock to find solutions, including prioritising urgent cargo. We are also continuing to refine our contingency plans in order to minimise the impact to the economy," Mohammed Mahomed, Transnet Acting Group Chief Executive said.
